Lightning Bolt Fires Standard Oil Works at Bayonne, N. J.

TANK AFTER TANK EXPLODED

Burning Streams Spread Destruction in All Directions.

LOSSES WILL BE IMMENSE

NEW YORK July 5-Fire at the works of the Standard Oil Company at Constable Hook, Bayonne, N. J., started early this morning. The damage will run into millions. The entire plant is almost certain to Naphtha tank No. 7 exploded shortly after 6 o'clock. The force of the explosion smashed windows on the hook and at least ne person was killed and several injured. Chas. King, an electrician, was the one killed, and John Wasto and Owen Drummond, watchmen, were overcome by fumes and smoke, and Fred Mauer was cut by flying glass. They all lived in Bayonne.

Started by a Bolt of Lightning. The fire started about 1 o'clock this morn ing by a bolt of lightning, which fell during terrific thunder storm and rain storm. It struck squarely in the immense yard of the Standard Oil Company, which covers over 600 acres of ground. King, the watchman, was struck by the bolt, and at the same time it exploded two immense reservoir tanks of crude oil. One hundred men were at work in the yards, and whether more were killed is not yet known. The explosion was heard for miles and the explosion was heard for miles and the heavens were lit up for hours afterward by the flames, which leaped a hundred feet in the air. Even at 8 o'clock this morning the column of smoke which rose from the still burning tanks spread out in such a cloud that to those coming to this city from the west the bright morning sun was obscured. Hotel Rapidly Consumed.

Within fifty yards of the exploded tanks was the Bayview Hotel used as a lodging louse by half a hundred Hungarians and Poles employed at the works. The thunder storm had already awakened them and when the explosion came they rushed pellmell out of the rear of the building, chased by the streams of burning oil which flowed by the streams of burning oil which flowed over and rapidly consumed the flotel.

The oil from the exploded tanks swept down the hill on which the works are located. Explosions followed like the crash of artillery as tank after tank was ignited by the fiery flood. Down to the water's edge it went spreading the circle of fire.

Nothing could stay its progress. Even the water was no obstacle and from the burning piers, which a little while before had been crowded with shipping, it flowed over into the Kill von Kull and floated in snaky wisps of flame out into the bay.

Saving Shipping.

Saving Shipping.

Meanwhile the Standard Oil tugs ran into the docks and dragged out fifty vessels which were lying at the company's piers. Then the tugs formed a cordon a little way out from the docks and fought the flames from that side. Great booms of logs were thrown out in a semi-circle to prevent the burning liquid from flowing unrestrained over the water and carrying destruction to shipping down the bay.

Inside the yards the Bayonne fire department made an ineffectual fight against the burning fluid.

Trenches Dug to Divert Flaming Streams.

Water was of no avail, and the fire had to be fought by strategy. Trenches were dug to divert the streams of burning oil from attacking property outside of the oil

Right in the line of fire with the wind blowing from the northeast were the plants of the Tidewater Oil Company, the Kalbfleisch Chemical Company, the Bayonne chemical works, the Bergenort Chemical Company, the Orford copper works, the Port Johnson coal docks, the Pacific Coast Barge Company and the crude oil docks. It was thought that none of these would be saved, but quick action by Vice President Alexander confined the fire to the Standard yards and the plants of the Columbia and French oil works, directly adjoining. He went into the crowds outside the fire lines and hired every man who would handle a shovel. These he put to work digging trenches around the circle of fire, and in this way the burning liquid was prevented from eating its way across the hook.

Half a Mile of Fire. Right in the line of fire with the wind

Half a Mile of Fire. At 10 a.m. the flames were shooting up into the air fully 300 feet high, and the blazing oil extended over an area of nearly half a mile. The heat was such that the firemen could not get near enough to the firemen could not get near enough to the flames to do much good. The fire boats along the shore at Constable Hook occupied a better position in this respect, but the water that reached the biazing oil had little effect.

The force of employes of the Standard Company resorted to their usual method when a fire breaks out in the works. They pumped oil from one set of tanks into others to a distant point from the blaze. This work was slow, as well as dangerous to human life, owing to the rapidity with which the flames communicated from one tank to another.

Early Estimate of Loss.

At 10:30 o'clock the total loss was estinated at $2,500,000. The company has its own system of insurance. None of the officials of the company at that hour believed that any one of the 100 men missing had been killed or severely injured, but several had been painfully burned. The company's locks at Constable Hook had been stripped, nd shipping was taken by tugs to a place

Tenement District Threatened. The tenement district of Bayonne at the bove hour was threatened by the flames, and the firemen were forced to turn their fforts in a new direction.

FAR-REACHING DECISION. Opinion Handed Down by Court of Appeals of Maryland.

special Correspondence of The Evening Star. ROCKVILLE, Md., July 4, 1900. The Maryland court of appeals has rendered a decision in the case of Ella V. Hodgson of Washington against the Southern Building and Loan Association of Knoxville, Tenn., reversing the decision of the circuit court for this county and remanding the case for trial. The decision is of interest by reason of the fact that t goes further than any other decision rendered by the court of appeals on the

The case originated in a non-resident section attachment proceedings against the Southern Euilding Association. The association was incorported under the laws of Tennessee, and in a suit in chancery instituted in Tennessee the association was declared insolvent and its affairs were placed in the hands of receivers. Prior to its being declared insolvent the association had been doing business in Montgomery county, through a local board of directors, which business consisted of receiving subscriptions to stock from and making loans to citizens of the county. The transaction between Mrs. Hodgson and the association, out of which the indebtedness of the association to Mrs. Hodgson arose, took place in Washington through the treasurer of the local board of directors of the association, and consisted of subscription to stock. Mrs. Hodgson sought to withdraw her money, and a short while after her demand, and without the money being pald, tion attachment proceedings against the
